

NEW 3D Prototype Printer

Macnaught's product development engineers have recently installed a new state of the art 3D printing system for rapid development of new products.

The plastic components produced on this machine can be assembled and tested creating a fast, cost effective method of proving new concepts early in the design process without heavy investment in manufacturing tooling.

This latest addition is consistent with Macnaught's lean manufacturing initiatives and investment in Australian design and manufacturing.

